

Summer Rayne Oakes

"I keep all of my cool reusable shopping bags in my underwear drawer; if I forget to take a bag, chances are then I forgot to put on my underwear."

Kim Barnouin

"When I go grocery shopping I try very hard to remember to bring my re-usable Whole Foods bags in with me. Unfortunately, that doesn't always happen. A few times I've had to take my groceries out of my cart, have them scanned, then put them all back in my cart without being in bags then putting them all in the car one by one and then getting home and putting them in the re-usable bags to carry inside my house! Now I put a note on my dashboard to remember my bags!"

Sophie Uliano

"The only way I remember is to use the small Chico Bag. I always make sure I have 3 or 4 of them in my purse and that way I am never caught unawares - out they come at the checkout and open into big sturdy grocery bags. When I unpack my shopping, I fold them back into the pouch and put them straight back in my purse - that way, if I go to the drugstore or hardware store or anywhere - I won't be caught without".

Kathy Mattea

"I decided to start using cloth shopping bags, but I kept forgetting to take them in to the store. I figured out, finally, that if I MAKE myself walk all the way back out to my car, while the cashier is checking me out, I may be more likely to remember them next time. And it worked! I now remember to bring them inside almost all the time, and I get a little more exercise along the way. The cashier is always fine with my trek, and the incentive to get back before he/she finishes ringing up the groceries is a little added heart-rate booster..."

Share your tip! or extreme story for remembering reusable bags with other PG readers. Go to www.positivelygreen.com and type "My Story" in the Greener Guide box.